Informal Resolution:

Agencies may attempt to resolve a complaint informally through mediation or conciliation. Informal resolution is not a requirement of the law, but it is a common practice. Informal resolution is often the preferred method of resolving a complaint because it is less costly and less time-consuming than a formal investigation. Informal resolution is also often more flexible and can be tailored to the needs of the parties involved.

COMPREHENSIVE INVESTIGATION

A comprehensive investigation is a formal investigation that is conducted by a designated investigator. A comprehensive investigation is required when a complaint involves a serious or complex issue, or when the informal resolution process has failed. A comprehensive investigation is also required when a complaint involves a potential violation of the law. A comprehensive investigation is a thorough and objective investigation that is designed to determine the facts of the case and to identify any potential violations of the law.

Assignment of Investigator:

The assignment of an investigator is a critical step in the investigation process. The investigator must be qualified to conduct the investigation and must be free from any potential conflicts of interest or bias. The assignment of an investigator is typically done by the agency's supervisor or the agency's chief of staff.

Conflicts of Interest and Bias:

Conflicts of interest and bias are potential problems that can compromise the integrity of an investigation. A conflict of interest occurs when the investigator has a personal or financial interest in the outcome of the investigation. Bias occurs when the investigator has a preconceived opinion or prejudice about the subject of the investigation. Both conflicts of interest and bias can lead to an unfair and biased investigation. It is important to identify and address any potential conflicts of interest or bias before the investigation begins.
